“ I remember when his grandfather, myself and his aunt went to his house when he was around 18 months old so his grandfather could put together a plastic building toy of some kind. The grandfather laid out all of the parts, starting with the small ones first, counted them and started counting the big parts. While he was counting the large ones, Devin came in and got the small pieces one at a time and ran off and hid them. His grandfather begin to think he was going nuts because every time he would reach for a part, it would be gone. He finally got up to go get the small pieces and when he came back, Devin was laying on top of the large pieces. His grandfather said "Devin, get up so I can build your toy." Devin said "No, No, No, I building." He did finally get the toy put together but it did take some coaching.
