“ I met Barbara in 2012. We were working on a project to remove a dam in Big Canoe Creek behind her house. There were several groups involved, The Friends of Big Canoe Creek, the Coosa Riverkeeper, the Nature Conservancy and the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. So she sat with us on many meetings to plan this removal. As you can imagine a project of this magnitude takes a lot of research, permits and planning. She was so patient. In one meeting while listening to details of these plans, she was worried about how long it would take. Well it was completed in November, 2013 and I think she was delighted because there was discussion it could take 3 years. She had stated that she was concerned she would no longer hear the water splashing over the dam since it would be gone. Well the guys promised her they would leave rocks in certain places to insure there would be rippling waters for her to hear from her back porch, and they did. This dam removal would not have happened without Barbara's approval and patience, period. The waters in Big Canoe Creek are flowing free again, as Nature intended and I think this is her legacy. Barbara, may you now enjoy the sounds of the rippling waters of Big Canoe Creek from a supreme point of view, from Heaven above. God Bless you and your family. Doug Morrison, President of The Friends of Big Canoe Creek
