“Daddy was a sweet, smart and loving father. We all agree he died of a broken heart since Mama died last year. Dementia is such a wicked monster. Each time he asked about Mama, it broke our hearts to have to tell him again and again that she had died. Watching him go through that agonizing grief was beyond painful.

They met at my great aunt, Sissy's boarding house and it was love at first sight. I was already in the picture but, he loved me as if I were his own. I've been told at their wedding I said, loudly, "My Mama and Daddy are getting married!". He adopted me and always loved me, even through my "terrible teens", which lasted well into my twenties. Mama's first husband may have been my birth father but Daddy was my DADDY and will always be.

I love and miss you, Daddy, and always will.
