“ Roland Collins or Popy known to the ones of us lucky enough to be family. Growing up he was my hero, he understood me and I spent a lot of time at his house. There he taught me how to fix things, build things and about hard work. He also showed me how to hunt, fix guns and be a really good shot. At the age of eight he had a 28 gauge custom fitted for me at the gun club he was a member at. I shot my first dove with that gun. The early mornings and country rides through the middle of nowhere were my favorite. He had me behind the wheel in a pasture at the age of eight, by the time I was twelve he let me drive the roads near where we hunted. The time and love he showed me will forever be remembered. He never met a stranger and could tell the best stories. When I had a problem, he had a solution. I’m going to miss the times and being able to pick the phone up and call him or come over and hangout while he reloaded shotgun ammo. He was a blue collar man that was never worried about fancy cars or big houses, he was simple. He showed me how to live life and do the best and be happy with it. The man could do anything. He was one of a kind and will be greatly missed by me and the rest of the family. What is getting me through this is knowing that death isn’t the end, one day I’ll see him again. I wish we all had more time with you! I love you Pop! You were my best friend and always pushed me to be a better man.
